Dear Jason:

I am delighted to provide this letter to you.

I recommend your company without reservation. Murray Brothers Construction Inc. provided complete construction and planning services to the Museum of Russian Icons for close to two years from 2004 to October 2006 resulting in a completed state-of-the-art building.

The building is an historic brick building dating from the earlier part of the nineteenth century. It served as the Town of Clinton library and post office and it has for most of its life served as a public building. It was in a complete state of disrepair when the Museum acquired it. Murray brothers provided the engineering assessments that lead to the complete jutting of the building and the insertion of a structural steel frame to prove stability and support for a complete interior re build. The exterior was carefully restored to its former glory and was done within the guide lines of historic preservation. The brick was re pointed, cleaned and a new roof identical to the profile of the original was installed. Photovoltaic solar collection panels were installed on the South-facing slant and a highly evolved technologically advanced energy collection system was installed under their supervision. Murray Inc built a team of experts and provided the planning, engineering and the site supervision for this project

Murray Brothers are fine architectural preservationists and excellent builders. The finished work was of the finest quality at a competitive price. I highly recommend the firm to anyone considering new or preservation building.

Cordially,

Kent Russell
