Dear Jason:

I would like to express my sincere gratitude for the performance of Murray Brothers Construction Inc. on our recently completed project for the West Concord Union Church in Concord, MA. At every step of the way it was clear that you had the best interests of the client at heart.

You took my drawings and completed an addition that the client, the congregation, and the neighbors all agree is a significant improvement to the building, completing a 1960's era addition in a way that complements the original 1890's structure. When I asked that you replicate certain details you did, with skill and artfulness. You went out of your way to find and use the best materials for the work, and installing in a way to make the completed structure a seamless extension of the existing building.

I felt that the organization was professionally lead with appropriate paperwork, rapid response, and fairness. Even in difficult situations you maintained a professional attitude, respected the needs of the client and redoubled your efforts to meet those needs. Your own personal control of this project was crucial to its positive outcome. Anne Marie and Jenna were able supporters of your efforts from the office.

I always felt that the crew in the field, especially your superintendent Matt Buckley, were not only able and skilled in performing their work in construction, but were always planning ahead and preparing for the next stages, ordering materials, scheduling subs, and choreographing the many players on site. Phil as Project Manager, with his many years in construction, was always thinking of ways to better accomplish the intent of my drawings, again dedicated to making a better project and accommodating the client and a major tenant. I felt this was truly a team effort from Murray Brothers, and in conjunction with me and the client.

I know you probably don't want to follow me all the way out here to Western New York for my current projects, but I would recommend your firm to any client or architect that you may encounter in developing your business.

Many thanks,

Paul D. Minor, AIA
